DUX/SABA foam bonding adhesive solution

DUX, a leader in high-efficiency spray equipment, and SABA, a European supplier of foam adhesive, have created the world's first one-part water-based foam adhesive that combines optimal bonding characteristics with the stability to be supplied via a pressurized fluid delivery system. According to the company, when the adhesive is applied with its patented Advanced Laminar Airflow Technology, the delivery system outperforms gravity feed systems. DUX and SABA have joined forces to provide a solution that guarantees a 20-percent savings on foam bonding adhesive costs, with zero up-front implementation expense.

Unidyne™ fabric treatment

DAIKIN and Dow Corning Corp. have developed Unidyne™ TG-5521 fabric treatment that delivers the oil and water repellency of fluorine and the softness of silicone. Unidyne is available in the new C6 fluorine platform, which is healthier for the environment.

DAIKIN and Dow Corning created an alliance in 2005 to develop new products that combine the benefits of fluorine and silicone. The alliance targeted a product with equal or better oil and water repellency when compared to traditional protective chemistry, an improved environmental footprint and a luxurious feel.

The new Unidyne TG-5521 fabric treatment will be available worldwide and sold exclusively by DAIKIN.
